Waterproof clothing is necessary, since there is a small price to pay for getting within such close range of the falls! Arriving at the Visitors Center, access the Nature Interpretation Center of Iguazu National Park, which also provides cultural, educational and social activities. This is the starting point for the amazing Devil's Gorge tour. Departing from Cataratas Station, the train takes you to Garganta Station in 18 minutes. HD Brazilian Falls

Before heading to your hotel, enjoy a half day sightseeing tour to the Brazilian side of the falls. The falls are the heart and main attraction of the National Park, which is also a vast forest made up of tropical wood species such as Brazilian walnut, cedar and peroba, an area home to a wide array of rare birds such as the macaw, toucan, parrot, as well as monkeys, crocodiles, armadillos and jaguars. UNESCO declared Foz do Iguazu National Park, in Brazil, Natural Heritage of Humanity in 1986, and two years after the naming of Iguazu National Park in Argentina. The visiting area consists of a single circuit of walkways facing the falls. The panorama it offers is really impressive. The circuit is 1,200 meters long, with stairs that make it impossible to circulate in wheelchairs. At the end of the circuit, there is an elevator. The staircase to get up has 32 step. It is of medium difficulty. Many say that from Argentina you live the Falls and from Brazil you watch them. Clients are themselves ultimately responsible for ensuring that they obtain any necessary visas (US citizens do not need Visa to enter Brazil).
